The Olio.

THE BIRTH DAY. Thy birth day, 'tis thy birth day, Thrice has the summer sun Shone on thy cloudless, happy brow. My own, my only one. Thy birth day, 'tis thy birth day, . What thoughts those little words Are conjuring from their dwelling place

To thrill on memory's chords. How swift the times as glided by,

Where have the moments flown, Since thou wert such a tiny thing, My beautiful, my own?

Since first I gazed upon thy brow, And pressed thy downy cheek, And wished that little voiceless tongue, Had but the power to speak;-And whisper all its little griefs, Close to thy mother's ear, And tell of joys so innecent

Now then art bounding by me With footsteps wild and free, And merry laughter gushing out From a heart brim full of glee.

Angels might pause to hear.

I list thy ceaseless prattle, From morn till dreamy night, No music to thy mother's car Awaken's such delight. The future-the dark future,

I think and tremble boy. Lest in the cup that thou shalt drink, There mingle base alloy. But whether joy shall brighten Or sorrow shade thy brow,

God keep thy heart as innocent,

Guiltless and pure as now.

OH: NO, WE NEVER TALK IN FRENCH. ALTERED BY MISS LESLIE, FROM AN ANONYMOUS PARODY A POPULAR SONG.

> Oh! no, we never talk in French, Its sound no more is heard; Our lips are now forbid to speak The smallest foreign word; I cannot say-"Mon cher ami, Comment vous portez vous;" Nor be reply-"Tres bien mon ange," Oh! ne, it would not do.

I dare not sigh-"Pensez a moi?"-Or-"Sayez vous fidele"-Nor can be say-"Toujours a toi"-Or-"An revoir, ma belle"-And if-"Ne m'onbliez pas"-slips out, (An 'twill ere I'm aware,) "They're talking French," is scream'd about, Ere I can add-"Mon cher."

And "in'simez vous"-I never hear, Nor dare he ever say "Jusqu' la mort"-so much we fear To parlet en Francais. All cars are open when he sits Beside me, after tea, Lest he should say-"acceptez moi?" And I should answer-"Oui."
